Read the text and answer the questions

The Equator passes through the land of eleven countries of the world, such as Kenya, Indonesia, Brazil and so on. Bolivia is nearer the Equator than Greece, but Greece is nearer the Equator than Denmark. The countries on the Equator mostly have tropical rainforest or an equatorial climate. Places nearer the Equator are hotter, and average annual rainfall is quite high. But why? The Equator divides the planet into a Northern Hemisphere and a Southern Hemisphere. It is halfway between the North Pole and the South Pole. The Earth is widest at its Equator. The heat comes from the Sun. The heat is the same at the Equator and at the Poles. But near the Poles the heat covers a larger area than at the Equator. So at the Poles each place gets less heat and it is colder. That's why places farther from the Equator are colder.
